

Each project we work on is unique. One of those unique aspects is whether or not the utility poles will remain in place. Sometimes the poles will stay to continue providing telephone and cable services. We would maintain electrical service to existing structures, like streetlights, garages, or other electrical services on the property. The project design would include feeding those services with a new underground line. Other times the poles may be removed as other utilities relocate their facilities with us. Your Dominion Energy point of contact will be able to provide the details about the scope of the project and whether the poles will be removed or not. As with any project, we look forward to partnering with customers to improve their electric reliability.
